

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I implore you to allow ISP's to provide DSL connections to consumers. I have been on the internet since before anyone even knew what an e-mail was, and during the time when the internet was a place where you could share knowledge and help one another with computer issues as well as a healthy communication.

It is scary to think that the big companies who monopolize the phone lines will be the only providers allowed to provide speedy access via DSL connections. This is a country where big and small alike should be afforded the same rights.

Thank you for listening.
